Agribusiness Management

The Monmouth College Business and Economics Department seeks candidates for a full-time, tenure track position to design, teach, shepherd and lead a new program in Agribusiness Management and to teach a few traditional business courses. The successful candidate will have an appropriate Masters' or Ph.D. in Agribusiness Management, Agricultural Economics or a traditional business discipline. The candidate should have the ability to develop and teach new courses in agribusiness. The candidate will have a leadership role in the new program including the freedom to design a program that embraces the spirit and values of a small liberal arts college.

The candidate should have a broad understanding of modern Midwest agribusiness in variety of contexts including production, marketing, management, strategy and stewardship. In addition to being a highly effective teacher and advisor, this faculty member must seek and supervise agribusiness internships.

Monmouth College aspires to be the home of a diverse, inclusive community of students, teacher/scholars and staff working as a team for the benefit of our students. As an equal opportunity employer, we welcome all candidates to join us in our shared mission and ask that all candidates indicate ways that they will support and contribute to the welcoming, diverse, and inclusive mission of Monmouth College.

Please send to facultysearch@monmouthcollege.edu: 1) a letter of application including evidence of teaching experience and teaching philosophy; 2) curriculum vitae (including the names and contact information of references), and; 3) a short statement describing your vision of the necessary skills and abilities of Agribusiness Management graduates.
